FOR SALE.

About thirty-five acres of land for sale inside corporation. All in fence with plenty of running water. A good chance for butcher or to feed cattle. For further particulars apply to John M. Kruegar.

Eleven wagons loaded with poultry, hogs, feed stuff and household effects came into town Wednesday morning from the west. It was Henry and Emil Hildebrandt on their way to their father's land below Hope, on the line between Lavaca and Jackson county, where they will farm. E. E. Hildebrandt owns 1200 acres of land there. Those who were moving them were John Baedeker, Otto Baumann, John D. Rogge and Willie Hildebrandt, of Shiner. George Stratman, sr. and George Stratman, jr., Wm. Jost, sr., Wm. Jost, jr. and Wm. Helweg of Witting. Gus Huff and Mathias Andrich also went down with loads Thursday.

Fine line of ladies' winter capes just received by Charles Muecke.

Neal Crane and Wat Miller of Moulton, was here Monday with a bunch of cattle for Flato & Green.

Willie Emler and A. B. Jungbecker left Sunday morning on an extended trip through the country in Willie's buggy. They may visit San Antonio before they return.

Wilks & Werner, of the planing mill, have turned out a fancy piece of work for C. Amsler the druggist. It consists of a large piece of fresco work extending across the room above the prescription counter.

Dear Sir: Send me the GAZETTE. Crops good here. Cotton coming in at the rate of 100 bales per day.

Yours truly,

J. A. HARRISON.

The following young people took in the ball at Moulton last Friday night: R. E. Welhausen, I. W. Griffith, Ed. Cox, J. B. Richter, Theo. Schuman, Misses Emma Miller, Selma Miller, Lenora Richter, Isabel Wendtland, Lee Conrad, Jennie Leick and Bertha Welhausen. The ball was at the Park Verein hall and was a gorgeous affair. The young people say Moulton is the only place to go to when it comes to balls.

Wolves.

Much complaint is being made about wolves out in the country. They seem to be rapidly increasing. They are the common prairie wolves. At Big Hill they come up to the houses in broad daylight and catch chickens, turkeys and pigs, and one even attacked a goat at L. M. Kokernot's in broad daylight.

Big Trout.

Jack Lighthall, who traveled many years with Dr. Frank Woods, is here with two companions and is plying his trade of mattresses making. He has his tent pitched near Morris' saloon. Sunday he went trolling in the creek north of town and caught seven trout, weighing one and a half pounds each. They were beauties and he had them cooked at Willie Emler's lunch stand. No one thought there were such large fish in the creeks here. Jack promises to show the writer how to troll one day this week. He also states that Dr. Woods has gone to Mexico. The last legislature raised the tax on medicine shows clear out of sight. It is now $100 state, $50 county, $50 city and $10 for each street performance. This drives all the medicine shows out of business.

Badly Scared.

Constable Pat Mueckleroy was on his way home the other night from town and when about opposite Mount Olive church, near Old Sweet Home, he observed a man ahead in the road on foot and soon the man left the road and dodged behind a gate post. It was midnight, and visions of a "holdup" by some party who had it in for him flashed through Pat's mind and checking up his horse he reached around and drew forth his faithful forty-five. It was too dark to tell whether the man was a Mexican or a white man, but as Pat got opposite the man called to him. Riding up to the post Pat inquired rather roughly, "who are you, any way?" whereupon it developed that it was a stray Mexican on his way to Uncle Tom Culpepper's to cut wood. "Well, my friend," said Pat, letting his six-shooter fall to a level with the man's head, "you came nearer being shot right then than you ever did before in your life." Catching sight of the gun the Mexican gave a howl of terror and started off up the road towards Shiner like a steer in a stampede. At a quarter past twelve by Pat's watch the Mexican started and according to Old Fritz Erwin, he arrived in town at 12:50, having run about six miles in thirty-five minutes. His companions had to come to town the next day to hunt him up.
